NEW FEDERALIZATION DRIVE?

Guard Assn. Girds To Rebuff Gen. LeMay's Attack On ANG

The National Guard Association's annual meeting in San Antonio next week will see a counter-attack launched against power-packed remarks made by General Curtis E. LeMay, Air Force Vice Chief of Staff.

In extemporaneous comments made 25 September to the second annual Air Force Chief of Staff's Reserve Forces Seminar at the Pentagon, General LeMay called for "one Reserve" and said he is "opposed" to the present structure of the Air National Guard.

The Vice Chief of Staff attacked the concept under which the Air National Guard is funded by both the Federal Government and the States.

In an unexpected blockbuster, General LeMay said, "I don't think the National Guard is efficient; I don't think it can live."

Emphasizing the tough budget problems which confront the Air Force, General LeMay, himself a veteran of Air National Guard service, said: "We are going to have to get more for our money. We need a Reserve program that is good and which will help us if we go to war."

He said that in event of sudden war, "there will be no time to mobilize," and

Pentagon Under Capitol Pressure To Revise Military Money Structure

THE Defense Department is under heavy pressure from Congress to come up with a new kind of budget—one that will accent functions and not individual Services.

Whether it will be possible to accomplish this task for the forthcoming fiscal '61 budget is not certain, but it is certain that the "functional concept" will receive heavy stress in hearings next year.

Leading the drive to force a new budget structure is Chairman George H. Mahon (D-Tex) of the House Military Appropriations Subcommittee.

Representative Mahon has charged that the present method of allocating funds to the Services, rather than to functions, is outdated.

Following up on criticism he made during the past session of Congress, Mr. Mahon has told Secretary of Defense McNamara that he is not satisfied with the manner in which the JCS decides on force levels.

"This country deserves a better setup and a better organization," the influential Appropriations Subcommittee Chairman has asserted.

His remarks were made in connection with testimony by the Service Chiefs on the fiscal '60 budget.

Former Army Chief of Staff, General Maxwell D. Taylor, won praise from Chairman Mahon for his contention that "changed strategic requirements call for corresponding changes in the pattern of military budget."

General Taylor stated: "I think that our weakness is not determining standards of sufficiency—how much is enough for atomic retaliatory force, for air defense, for limited warfare forces, for strategic airlift and sealift, for Reserve type forces—all of those categories to which several Services contribute."

General Taylor maintained that "we never look at the problem horizontally

Radm. Harris Heads New Navy Billet

The Navy has established the billet of Commander, Fleet Air, San Diego, "as part of a plan to standardize the command relationships of naval aviation activities."

Fleet air commander billets already exist in other areas. Fleet air commanders are assigned additional duty as commander of naval air bases within a naval district or other specified areas, effective 10 October.

RADM. Dale Harris, USN, assigned in San Diego as Commander, Naval Air Bases, Eleventh and Twelfth Naval Districts, will assume the duty of Commander, Fleet Air, San Diego, with additional duty as Commander, Naval Air Bases, Eleventh Naval District.

RADM. Murr E. Arnold, USN, Commander, Fleet Air, Alameda, assumes the additional duty of Commander, Naval Air Bases, Twelfth Naval District.

All Services Below Budget Strength

THE Armed Forces are short by more than 18,000 men the authorized budget strengths for this fiscal year. Further declines are probable.

Latest Pentagon statistics show an active strength of 2,501,722 at the start of September, compared with a budget-authorized force of 2,520,000.

Here are the new strength figures, with the anticipated budget levels for next June shown in parentheses: Army, 861,288 (870,000); Navy, 629,728 (630,000); Air Force, 836,107 (845,000); and Marine Corps, 174,599 (175,000).

One year ago the Services had a strength of 2,604,628.

Inter-Service Team

Lt. Gen. William D. Eckert, USAF, left, Deputy Commander of the Tactical Air Command, Langley AFB, Va., and Maj. Gen. N. H. Vissering, USA, Commanding General of Ft. Eustis, Va., made a formidable team in the senior division doubles of the Tidewater Armed Forces Open Tennis Tournament at Eustis last weekend.

They came out second, losing to Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Francis L. Sampson, USA, and Maj. Charles J. McLaughlin, USA, both of Continental Army Command Headquarters at Ft. Monroe, Va., by the score of 8-6, 6-3. Chaplain Sampson, who is known as the "Paratroppers Padre," also won the senior singles.

Army Drops 10-Ton "Cat" Loads In Test

CAMP BRECKINRIDGE, KY.

THE Army has proved that it can air-drop successfully a complete engineer battalion with all of its heavy equipment conditions.

In the Army's first mass drop of battalion engineer equipment, including five mammoth Caterpillar D6S tractors weighing 20,518 pounds each when rigged, the 326th Engineer Airborne Battalion of the 101st Airborne Division staged a spectacular mobility demonstration here on 30 September.

The airdrop had been delayed 24 hours

Funds 'Requirement' Set At $60 Million

A top Air Force budget authority has declared that to meet individual Service "requirements" would require a budget of about $60 million.

This was reported by Maj. Gen. R. J. Friedman, USAF Director of Budget, Comptroller, to the Reserve Forces Seminar at the Pentagon last week.

He said such a figure "would be com-

MUCH PROGRESS, BUT MANY PROBLEMS:

Multiple Missile Crews Accent Housing Plight; AF Studies Remote Duty Pay

(Officer Promotion Analysis, Page 8)

THE Air Force has made significant gains in over-all retention of officers and airmen, but faces formidable problems in achieving the "selective retention" goals required for aerospace missions.

L/G Landon

The most critical need, according to Lt. Gen. Truman H. Landon, Deputy CofS, Personnel, is for more housing. Reporting to the Reserve Forces Seminar last week, General Landon said that the requirement for multiple crews at radar and missile sites, has sharpened the impact of the housing shortage. The Air Force Personnel Chief said his Service is studying the problem of remote and isolated duty pay, recommended by the Cordiner Committee but shelved by the Department of Defense.

General Landon told the Reserve Forces representatives that a revision in quarters allowances, also proposed by the Cordiner Committee, is needed in the absence of sufficient numbers of quarters.

Pointing up the progress the Air Force has made in personnel retention, General Landon said that in 1954 the ratio of men on their first enlistment to career airmen was about three to one. By last year, the ratio was 52 to 48, with fiscal '59 statistics showing a ratio of 39 to 61.

SPACE RANKS

What about ranks for a Space Force? Turn to Page 10 for a suggested slate.

NEXT WEEK—

An action-packed meeting of the National Guard Association is certain for San Antonio next week in the wake of the strong remarks made by General Curtis E. LeMay, Air Force Vice CofS, regarding the Air National Guard (see first page). A JOURNAL representative will cover the Association proceedings.

A decade ago, the Army had an overwhelming advantage over the other Services when it came to the experience factor in top ranks. That is no longer the case. The situation is not likely to improve if the Army continues to accent length of service in making advancements to three- and four-star rank. An analysis of the four-star and three-star structure in the Services will show in the 10 October issue how the Army has fallen behind, in comparison to the Air Force and Navy.

Gen. Bradley Heads Marshall Foundation

General of the Army Omar N. Bradley has accepted appointment as President of the George C. Marshall Research Foundation. He succeeds John C. Hagan, Richmond investment banker, who becomes Chairman of the Board.

The appointment was made at a meeting of the Board of Directors at the Virginia Military Institute, site of the Foundation which is devoted to collecting and preserving papers and mementos of General of the Army Marshall.

New directors are Lt. Gen. Milton G. Baker, Superintendent of Valley Forge Military Academy; Carter Lane Burgess, President of American Machine and Foundry Co., a Reserve Colonel a former Assistant Secretary of Defense, and President Fred Carrington Cole of Washington and Lee University.

L/C Hirsch Directs Huntsville Missile Division

Lt. Col. Oliver M. Hirsch has been named Director of the Industrial Division, Army Ballistic Missile Agency, Huntsville, Ala., under Brig. Gen. J. A. Barclay.

He replaces Col. Calvin Heath, new Chief of the Control Office, Army Ordnance Missile Command, parent organization to ABMA.

Colonel Hirsch recently returned to the Missile Command after completing the Army Ordnance Corps' Executive Development Program which combined a 2-year course in the University of Chicago's Graduate Business School with a managerial survey of industrial practices in a number of large international corporations.

Mrs. Hirsch and a daughter, Karen, remained at the residence, 1008 Edgewood Avenue in Huntsville, during the Colonel's tour in Chicago. Karen, a 1959 graduate of Huntsville High School, has entered Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn, where a son, Martin, is a senior.

HUNTSVILLE MAYOR RAPS THE PENTAGON

MAYOR R. B. Searcy of Huntsville, Ala., home of the Army's Ballistic Missile Agency, issued the following blast at the Pentagon's decision on allocation of space projects to the Services (THE JOURNAL 26 September):

"It's incredible to me, as Mayor of the City of Huntsville, Alabama, that the Defense Department could kick the U. S. Army out of the Space Field.

"The whole world knows that the U. S. Army:

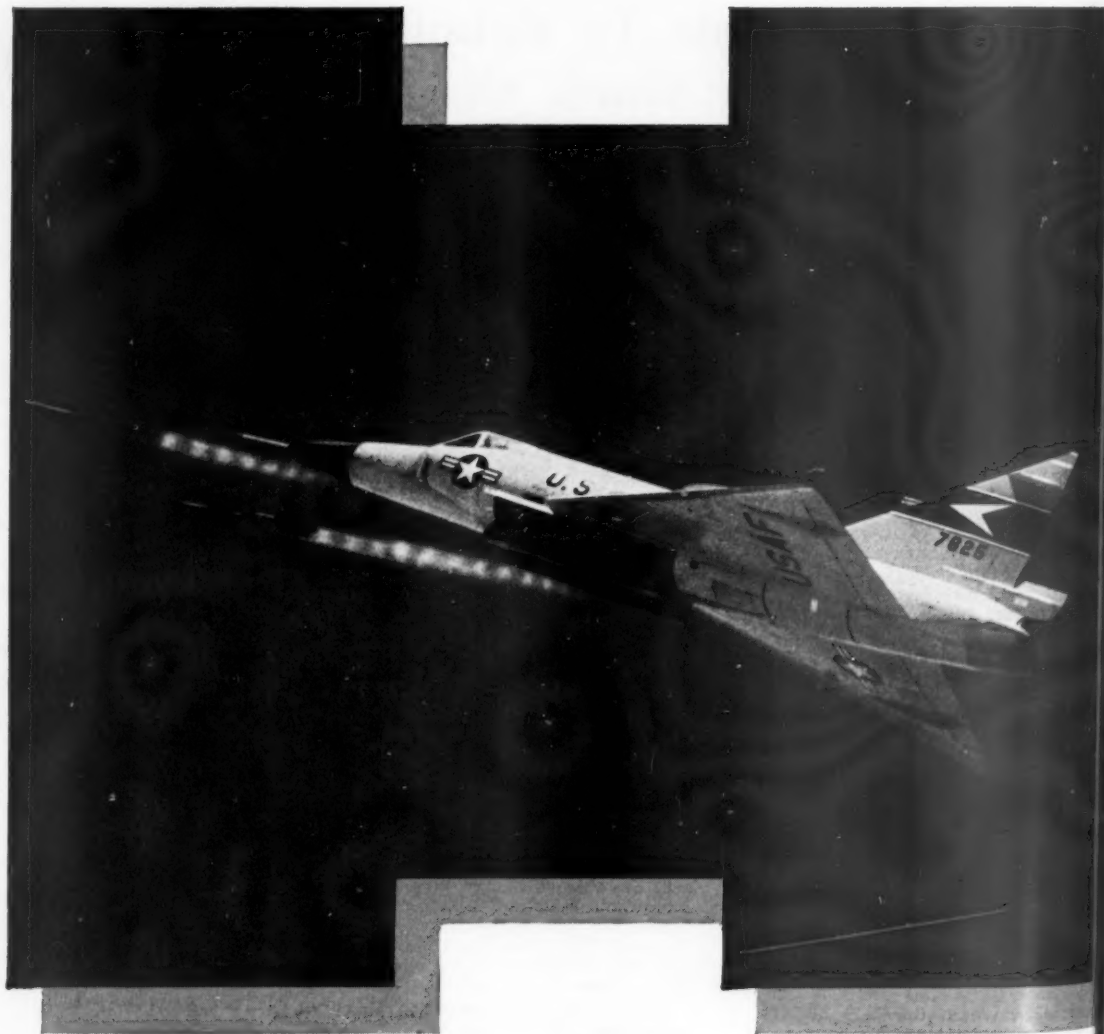

"1. Put up the first free-world satellite around the Earth.

"2. Put the first made-in-the-USA satellite around the Sun.

"3. Kept the entire free-world in the race for space.

"As a reward for this magnificent and indisputable record, the Defense Department not only umpires the Army out of the ball park but steals all the balls as well."

Comptroller Is Scored For Decision Restricting Right To Correct Service Records

The Retired Officers Association has attacked Assistant Comptroller General Frank H. Weitzel's decision to limit the authority of boards for the correction of military records.

The Association told THE JOURNAL Mr. Weitzel's decision indicates "a lack of understanding of what constitutes the records of members of the military services," and "a lack of discernment as to what constitutes an 'injustice' as contemplated in the statute."

The decision is "contrary to Congressional intent," the Association maintains.

Crux of the Comptroller's decision is that the authority of Service Secretaries, acting through a correction board, "is limited to the correction of factual situations."

Mr. Weitzel said: "If the existing record states the actual facts and the purported correction merely recites such facts, no additional rights can accrue as a result of such action."

The case involved payment of increased retired pay to Capt. Victor L. Oleson, USA-Ret., for the period from 24 February 1943 to 27 August 1948. Amount involved is $1,288.44.

Captain Oleson, who served during WWI, was retired for disability in 1934.

He was called back to active duty in 1941 and served until 1943.

At the time he was separated from the Service in 1943, he was not allowed to credit his first period on the retired list for retired pay credit.

After the Court of Claims decision in Gordon V. U. S., Captain Oleson became entitled to pay credit for his first period on the retired list. The credit and back pay as far back as 28 August 1948 was approved by Comptroller General.

Award of increased retired pay for periods prior to the 1948 date, the Comptroller ruled, were barred by the 10 year statute of limitations.

To secure added retired pay from 1943 to 1948, Captain Oleson then petitioned the Army correction board to change his record to show his right to increased retired pay became effective in 1943. The board, to correct the "injustice" in the case, agreed.

But, Comptroller Weitzel now says, the correction "is without legal significance."

Mr. Weitzel points out that the "correction board's action in this case appears to be an attempt to avoid the operation of the statute of limitations by a recital of facts in the existing record."

Mr. Weitzel's decision does not mention the correction board's legal right to amend records for the purpose of removing an "injustice."

In summing up its case, the ROA stated that "the decision of the Comptroller General that the 10 year statute of limitations, applicable to claims made to his office, bars the payment of back pay for longer periods when authorized by boards to correct military records and approved by the secretaries concerned, is contrary to the law jurisdictionally and in disregard of the facts."

"That such matters were completely removed from the jurisdiction of the Comptroller General, except for mere supervision over the mathematical computations, in the statute authorizing the correction of military records for the removal of an injustice, is crystal clear in the wording of the law itself," the Association said.

"In this connection," the ROA said, "the office of the Comptroller General participated in the making of that legislative history, and the recommendations of that office to permit the Comptroller General to have jurisdiction in such matters was specifically and emphatically rejected by the Congressional Committee before which the law was considered."

Further action in the Oleson case is being planned by the Washington, D. C., law firm of Emery and Wood.

the Falcon's claw

Faster flying, higher climbing, farther reaching... the new supersonic Falcon is today's best performing air-to-air missile.

The Super Falcon GAR-3, newest in the family of Falcon missiles, is powered by a new and longer-lived solid propellant rocket engine. It can climb far beyond the altitude capabilities of the interceptor and destroy an enemy H-bomber in any kind of weather.

Hughes Research & Development engineers, always moving forward, are also developing the GAR-9, a new atomic air-to-air missile. This missile will be used with the F-108, a fantastically swift, long range interceptor being built for the Air Defense Command.

The new atomic missile will be able to reach out over extremely long distances and destroy enemy bombers long before they reach their U.S. and Canadian targets.

At Hughes, advanced Research & Development is not confined to guided missiles. Investigations presently underway at the Hughes R&D Laboratories include advanced airborne systems, space vehicles, nuclear electronics, and subsurface electronics...just to name a few.

At Hughes, in Fullerton, engineers are engaged in the research, development and manufacture of advanced three-dimensional radar systems.

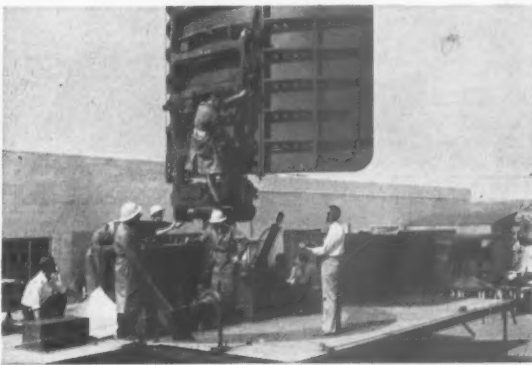

Throughout the Hughes organization, special emphasis is put on building reliability into every system to assure maximum utilization under the most severe conditions.

Advanced concepts...reliable hardware...these are the factors which have made Hughes one of the world's leading electronics producers.

Army Tells Procedures For Pay Mechanization

A go slow policy in mechanizing the Military Pay Voucher System has been ordered by the Army.

Specifically prohibited by AR 25-50 are any mechanical procedures which might tend to impair mobility or the ability of finance sections to operate under tactical conditions. Army-wide authorization to use the machines will be given only after approval of the Comptroller General.

DeHavilland Caribou Scores At CONARC

THE Army's largest new airplane, the deHavilland "Caribou," was demonstrated last week to officials of Continental Army Command Headquarters at Ft. Monroe, Va.

The twin-engine propeller driven craft gave an "impressive demonstration of its short-field performance capabilities at Walker Army Airfield, becoming airborne after a run of less than a hundred yards and coming to stop after a slightly longer landing roll," it was reported from Monroe.

The Caribou is designed to operate from short, improvised airstrips in close support of the Army in forward battle areas, carrying out aerial supply dropping, movement of men and materials, and casualty evacuation.

A ceremony marking the U. S. Army's official acceptance of the first Caribou will be held 8 October at the plant of the deHavilland Aircraft of Canada at Downsview, Ontario, Canada.

With a wing span of 96 feet, the high-tailed plane can accommodate 32 men or three tons of cargo. Five of the planes are now being prepared for delivery to the Army by the manufacturer, deHavilland Aircraft of Canada.

Future CMC Shoup Will Get Third Star; Marines Reassign Top Commanders

Maj. Gen. David M. Shoup, who becomes Commandant of the Marine Corps 1 January with four stars, will replace retiring Lt. Gen. Robert E. Hogaboom, CofS, on 1 November in three-star rank.

Also named to be lieutenant generals in recess appointments which must be confirmed by the Senate next year are:

Maj. Gen. Joseph C. Burger, CG, Second Marine Division, Camp Lejeune, N. C., who relieves Lt. Gen. Edwin A. Pollock, retiring as CG, Fleet Marine Forces, Atlantic.

Maj. Gen. Edward W. Snedeker, CG, First Marine Division, Camp Pendleton, Calif., who succeeds Lt. Gen. Merrill B. Twining, Commandant of the Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, Va., and brother of General Nathan F. Twining, USAF, Chairman of the JCS.

Commandant-designee Shoup reports to his two-month, three-star post from Parris Island, S. C., where he is CG of the Marine Corps Recruit Depot.

General Shoup was nominated for the Corps' top post last month from a position junior to five three-star officers and four two-star officers. Subsequently, the entire slate of five lieutenant generals submitted retirement requests, with four to end their careers 1 November and one, Lt. Gen. Verne J. McCaul, Assistant Commandant, on 1 January.

The three-star nominations have touched off a series of other command shifts.

Maj. Gen. James P. Berkeley, CG, Department of the Pacific, San Francisco, relieves General Burger.

Maj. Gen. Henry R. Paige, Marine Corps, G-4, moves into the slot vacated by General Snedeker.

Three Good Reasons why you should be insured with USAA

We could name many more, but even these three are reasons enough why you should be insured with USAA.

SAVINGS of 38.8% off standard rates are currently provided statewide USAA automobile policyholders. No other insurance company offers the same broad coverage at so low a cost. Such savings are possible because USAA is a non-profit association—policyholders are a preferred risk group*—and no salesmen are employed or commissions paid to secure business.

SOUND MANAGEMENT Since its founding 37 years ago, USAA has been managed and directed by active and retired officers of the U.S. Armed Forces. There are more than half-a-million USAA policies in force and assets at year end 1958 totaled over $58 million. Liberal dividends have consistently been paid to USAA policyholders with more than $64 million returned since 1922.

GEOGRAPHICAL SERVICE USAA policies are in effect over a wide geographic area†. Claims are settled promptly even in the most remote places. Wherever USAA operates there are authorized attorneys and claims adjusters conveniently located to serve you and to expedite a settlement.

Take advantage of the greater savings, protection and reliability offered by USAA. In addition to automobile insurance, USAA also makes available policies covering COMPREHENSIVE PERSONAL LIABILITY and a WORLD-WIDE HOUSEHOLD GOODS AND PERSONAL EFFECTS FLOATER.

Mail the coupon below to secure rates on your automobile, or for information on these other policies.

*Membership in United Services Automobile Association is limited to active and retired Regular officers, midshipmen, cadets and warrant officers of the United States Army, Air Force, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Public Health Service, Coast and Geodetic Survey; Foreign Service Officers of the Department of State; Reserve and National Guard officers when ordered to extended active Federal duty for a period of six months or longer; the widows of such officers and warrant officers so long as their status is not changed by remarriage. Reserve and National Guard officers who have established membership in USAA while on active duty and who are later released to inactive or retired status, may continue their insurance or renew their insurance at any time so long as they retain their commissions or warrants.
†USAA operates in the United States, its possessions and territories; Canada, Cuba and the Canal Zone; Japan, the Philippines, and certain U.S. bases in the Pacific; as well as in Western Continental Europe when the policyholder is on active duty.

Contradictions In Two Laws Confuse Air Force Officer Promotion Picture

THE Air Force is confronted with "inherent contradictions" in promotion laws which provide for more colonels in a force of 69,425 officers—the Regular Officer Augmentation Act strength—than are authorized in the actual present force of 126,000 officers.

This point was brought to light in a comprehensive presentation on Air Force manpower progress and problems made last week to the Reserve Forces Seminar by Lt. Gen. Truman H. Landon, Deputy CofS, Personnel.

He told how the Augmentation Act provides for 5,554 colonels, 9,719 lieutenant colonels, and 13,190 majors for the 69,425 Regulars that are authorized.

However, the Officer Grade Limitation Act imposes a limit of 5,172 colonels, 10,457 lieutenant colonels, and 22,803 majors for a force of 126,000 officers.

"You will note," said General Landon, "that in the upper range of field grades, if the officers in the Regular Establishment are given their promotions on schedule, the authorizations for the total force are virtually exhausted."

General Landon illuminated the Air Force policy decisions on the promotion dilemma as follows:

"Mathematically, the Air Force has little choice. It can give its Reserve officers career status and their 'share' of the field grade promotions only by denying them Regular status. We could retain a smaller Regular corps and then hold comparable Reserve retention boards and promotion boards.

"On the other hand, we can do what we have done; that is to select them for Regular status. Legally, this is the only real guarantee. But, competition for Regular status is double-barrelled competition because the attainment of Regular status pre-empts, mathematically, the bulk of the promotions available in the active force. This is so far a badly misunderstood part of the program and a bitter pill to the officer who has not obtained Regular status.

"As I have said, we are bound between two laws; nevertheless, we still need 126,000 officers. If not all can be Regulars, the others are NOT the less needed. They fill a vital role. In no sense, within the Air Force personnel system, are they excess. Our problem is how to keep them—not how to get rid of them. Our problem is to find inducements to retain them which will give them decent service incentives and decent service rewards to take the place of the full career rewards we are unable to offer. At the present time, we plan a substitute career pattern for this group.

"We expect and have experienced the loss of a number of junior active duty officers to the Reserve and civilian life. A certain amount of this is normal and desirable since, as you know, the active force supplies the input to the Reserve—itsself something of a paradox. We hope to reduce not our input to the Reserve, necessarily, but our losses to the Air Force officer corps from this group. After competition has determined that large portion who will be given career status, we hope to be able to offer the remaining Reserve officers 'Term Retention Contracts.' This is the most important career change pending for Reserve officers on active duty. We had hoped to have legislation authorizing these during the past session of Congress. The proposal, in a bill (H.R. 5132) entitled 'The Reserve Officers' Incentive Act of 1959,' was acted upon and passed by the House of Representatives on 20 March 1959. It has yet to be acted upon by the Senate. . .

"In the personnel system, this legislation is not a tidbit for a select group or something with which to satisfy the Reserve. Rather, it is a fundamental concept in our officer career structure. It is the factor which will enable us, insofar as it is legally possible and in consideration of the possible fluctuations of the active force, to provide the officer who cannot be offered full career status with a substitute career aimed at 20-year retirement. In this pattern, under term retention contracts, the officer would receive either 20-year retirement or a substantial cash guarantee.

"On the subject of active duty promotions, one of the last acts of the past session of Congress was legislation on our grade limitations which permit us to fill an additional 3,000 major spaces. Our plans for using these will give primary consideration to officers of long service, primarily Reserves, who would not otherwise have had any appreciable opportunity for promotion. We are looking toward a revision of the Officer Grade Limitation Act which will improve our total promotion opportunity and equate the Air Force with the other services in this respect."

Mammoth Radar Gets SAGE Test

A rotating 50-ton "boxcar-shaped" radar antenna, 104 feet long, is being tested for use with the SAGE air defense network.

The new system, called AN/FPS-28, is one of the Air Force's most modern "heavy-weight" radars designed to feed advanced warning data into a central combat center. Final system tests are expected to begin shortly at Houma Air Force Station, 60 miles southwest of New Orleans.

Developed by Raytheon Company under a $20 million engineering program, the new-generation "super-sentry" will detect invaders hundreds of miles away to give early warning.

New Raytheon-developed power tubes, the amplifrons and traveling wave—coupled with improved design—give the advanced surveillance set many combat advantages. The antenna will be tower-mounted on a three-story transmitter-receiver structure housing the 262 separate units making up the system.

Overall system weight is 800 tons.

Work on the new radar began in 1956. It was developed in Raytheon's Government Equipment Division laboratory in Wayland, Mass.

Maj. Donahue Is Commander

The 4650th Air Transport Squadron (Medium) has been activated at Richards-Gebaur AFB, Mo., with the mission of providing air support for the Air Defense Command. Maj. Joseph P. Donahue is commander.

The squadron, equipped with C-123 two-engine transports, will be the parent unit for two other transport detachments at Stewart AFB, N. Y., and Hamilton AFB, Calif.

Hound Dog Missile Will Add Power To B-52; Provide Navigation Assist

Lt. Gen. Roscoe C. Wilson, Air Force Deputy CofS, Development, has revealed that North American Aviation's Hound Dog missile increases the flight performance of the Boeing B-52 bomber.

He said the B-52 pilot "can start the engines of his two Hound Dogs while still on the ground and use them as supplemental thrust for take-off or in the event of an emergency."

General Wilson made the disclosure at the Air Force Chief of Staff's Second Annual Seminar conducted at the Pentagon 24-25 September.

He also told his audience that the Hound Dog "will have its own self-con-

National Guard Association Will Answer General LeMay's Remarks

from first page—
maintained that "weekend soldiers will not do. We can't afford to man our tremendously costly weapons with part-time help."

General LeMay's call for "One Reserve" is certain to trigger off heated discussion of the National Guard Association meeting next week. His remarks will be interpreted as a new call for Federalizing the Guard.

The Vice Chief of Staff appeared at the Reserve Forces Seminar as a substitute for General Thomas D. White, Air Force Chief of Staff.

Accenting the tight fiscal situation, General LeMay said that "drastic decisions" will be necessary and said some of these decisions will be "unpalatable."

The general told an audience of Air Force Reserve and Air National Guard leaders that "I've never been too happy with the Reserve Program."

During the past four years, the Federal Government has spent about $1 billion on the Air National Guard. In this period, the States have allocated about $200 million for ANG activities.

There have been numerous instances in recent years when questions have been raised concerning control of Air National Guard planes which cross state lines. The Adjutants General have taken the position that it is up to the Air Force to tell them what is required and that every effort will be made to solve "jurisdictional" problems.

At the start of the fiscal year, the Air National Guard consisted of 567 units, including 24 combat wings, 82 tactical squadrons, 10 tactical support flying squadrons and 104 ground support units.

There are about 70,000 officers and men in the Air Guard.

There are 22 ANG tactical squadrons standing "runway alert" in the Air Defense Command network, six of them on 24-hour alert, the others on 12-hour sun-up to sun-down alert.

Addressing the same Seminar at which

General LeMay spoke, Maj. Gen. Winston P. Wilson, Deputy Chief of the National Guard Bureau, declared:

"The ANG is only ready to join formation with the U.S. Air Force in the event of a national emergency—but is in formation on a day by day basis in the performance of various peacetime missions."

"We in the Air National Guard," General Wilson continued, "know the potential of our force and fully realize its capability for additional peacetime and wartime roles. We feel confident that any additional roles can be carried out by the Air National Guard in its usual outstanding manner."

"WET" SPEECH

A joke was employed to relieve the tension created by General LeMay's blunt talk.

Following the Vice CofS on the speaker's platform, Lt. Gen. William E. Hall, ConAC Commander, told this story:

Some years ago at a newly established squadron base, the CO noticed that the base did not look neat enough. He decided to do something to improve the appearance of the base and told his junior officers he was offering a prize to the unit that developed the best looking lawn.

One junior officer, anxious to win the prize, told his master sergeant to make sure the lawn was watered every day. The sergeant assigned a private to the duty. The private watered and watered, and the lawn was doing just fine.

But one day the sergeant entered the barracks to find the private asleep in his bunk. Being a good sergeant, he tipped over the private's bunk.

The sleepy private, rubbing his eyes, asked, "What's the idea, sarge?"

"Didn't I tell you to make sure the lawn was watered every day?" the sergeant demanded.

"Sure, sarge," the private said, "but it's raining outside!"

"Well," the sergeant roared, "you've got a raincoat, haven't you?"

General Hall observed: "Well, I wish I had a raincoat, because my speech just got rained on, all over."

ConAC Chief Calls Reserve Pay Ceiling "Unrealistic"; Chances For Improvement In Fiscal '61 Budget Reported Slim

The Defense Department ceiling on drill pay is hurting the Air Force Reserve program, and there is not much hope for improvement.

This was the message brought to the Reserve Forces Seminar by Lt. Gen. William E. Hall, who heads the Continental Air Command, with headquarters at Mitchel AFB, N. Y.

Describing the ceiling as a "continuing hurdle," General Hall said that at present the Air Force is permitted to pay only 63,000 members of the Reserve and 72,000 members of the Air National Guard.

"To me, this is unrealistic if the Air Reserve Forces are to attain the strength laid down by war planning," General Hall told the seminar.

In fiscal year 1959, he reported, the strength of the ARF and ANG increased from 569,000 to 623,800.

"There is an ample inventory of officers and airmen available to the Air Reserve," General Hall said, "The problem becomes one of inducing them to participate in training programs in order to retain or increase their proficiency.

"I have always held the belief," the ConAC Commander continued, "that if a man is to be a member of the Air Reserve Forces and be willing to train for his possible M-day duty, he certainly is entitled to some pay, however small it may be."

"We may hope," he said, "for some changes for the better in the Department of Defense ceilings on drill pay, but I cannot say that I am overly optimistic."

General Hall said that the personnel who make up the Air Reserve Forces "represent an investment by the American people of about $11 billion" in training costs.

Aircraft, equipment, and bases represent another $3.5 billion.

General Hall noted that ConAC trains more pilots and airmen than the Air Training Command and schools more individuals in military skills than any university in the world. It supervises the training of almost as many wings as SAC and more than any other Air Force command.

The Reserve Forces aircraft inventory includes more than 1950 jet fighters and more than 750 transports.

Congress Holds '60 Key To Career Gains

It is becoming increasingly evident that it will be up to the next session of Congress to take the initiative in providing legislation to enhance career attractiveness in the Armed Forces. The Defense Department isn't going to do much about the problem in 1960.

A tipoff to the attitude of the budget-pinched Pentagon was the disclosure in last week's issue of THE JOURNAL that the Defense Department intends to do nothing about sponsoring a bill that would authorize a DentiCare program. This decision has been made in the face of earnest and repeated recommendations by Assistant Secretary of Defense, Health and Medical, Dr. Frank B. Berry, that DentiCare is essential to the health and welfare of Service families.

There will, of course, be one notable exception to the Pentagon's negative attitude. This pertains to the certain support by Secretary of Defense McElroy of legislation to equalize retired pay. President Eisenhower has advocated such action.

In view of the obvious reluctance of the Pentagon to press for other actions that would improve the quality of military manpower, we suggest that the House and Senate Armed Services Committees early next year summon top commanders from the field to learn what actions are needed. There is no doubt that such leaders as General Thomas E. Power, SAC CinC who has demonstrated the most courage in recent months in speaking out on manpower problems, could provide illuminating information for the legislators.

Congress needs facts on which to make crucial decisions concerning military manpower legislation. These facts can be obtained best from the testimony of combat commanders.

F-108 Cancellation Is A Danger To Defense

The decision of the Department of Defense to terminate the Air Force's contract for the advanced F-108 long-range interceptor is a blow to the future of manned aircraft which air power experts believe will be a necessary part of our defenses for years to come.

There is not a leader in the air power field who does not envision a role for manned aircraft as far as can be seen into the future. The Strategic Air Command, for example, would reply to the first emergency by sending its long range bombers off to their targets. The intercontinental missiles would be held back, weathering the first enemy blow under the protection of their hardened sites. It is reasoned that if the alarm should prove to be false, the manned bombers, unlike missiles once fired, could be recalled.

The Tactical Air Command, while missile-minded, feels that it would be the manned fighter bombers which would be the first to probe the enemy if war should come. Here, the targets would not be so well defined so that the pilots would have to search out and select the initial targets—something even the most sophisticated missile can not do.

Air Defense Commander Lt. Gen. Joseph H. Atkinson has been looking toward a "big jump" in the interceptor field, i.e., to a Mach 3 long-range interceptor such as the F-108. General Atkinson points out that no one can say with certainty that the Soviets are or are not working on a Mach 3 bomber. If they should come up with one and we do not have an advanced interceptor such as the F-108, we will be in a sorry plight.

If manned aircraft are to continue to be a necessary part of our defenses, we would be foolish, indeed, to freeze progress in that field. Existing equipment will soon be obsolete and we must have advanced designs coming along.

In many ways the Defense Department's decision in the F-108 case is similar to that of former Secretary Louis Johnson's order cancelling the Navy's first projected super-carrier, the USS United States. That action in 1949 so "very deeply disturbed" then Secretary of the Navy, John L. Sullivan, that he resigned with the statement that the cancelling of the carrier was "the first attempt ever made in this country to prevent the development of a powerful weapon."

In the case of the carrier, while the USS United States was scrapped, the Navy subsequently obtained authorization for a long range program of supercarrier construction that is still underway.

No one claims that the F-108 was not living up to its promises; on the contrary there has been nothing but praise for the prospects offered by this forward-looking development. That it should be shot down for budget reasons is deplorable.

READERS' VIEWS

"Objective Reporting"

■ Thank you very much for the 12 September issue of THE JOURNAL, with its splendid coverage of the Air Force Association Convention and Aerospace Panorama. This memorable event was, from all indications, a great success, and I know that all of us in MATS who attended were very favorably impressed.

The ARMY NAVY AIR FORCE JOURNAL, which is always read with great interest in this Headquarters, lived up to its usual high standards in the news and editorial coverage of this convention.

We were particularly happy, of course, with the MATS editorial on page 10 and with the MATS stories on pages 12 and 20. The story of this command is one which, because misconceptions are rampant, needs as widespread a telling as possible. Your objective reporting is certainly a large help in attaining this goal.

Narrow Gauge Need

■ I am attempting to compile a history of the operation of the Ft. Benning, Ga., Narrow Gauge Railroad, which operated from 1921 to 1946. Research material in the written form is somewhat limited concerning this railroad and I feel your wide circulation among military personnel will greatly assist me in gathering the necessary material.

In addition to anecdotes and technical data, I especially need photographs. Any such information supplied by your readers will be copied and returned if requested.

Credit To 81st Congress

■ Because of certain small elisions and change of punctuation in my letter appearing in the issue of 19 September, an inaccuracy of fact appears, plus a slight warping of meaning. I wrote, "In all the articles I have read about it (tombstone), I have seen no one recall a former occasion when Congress considered this very same subject. The 81st Congress, in writing the Career Compensation Act of 1949, could have extended * * *." Also, the quoted section is Sec. 522 of the Career Compensation Act, not of the Act of 6 June 1942. The proper quote would be, "Sec. 522, (Career Comp. Act.) (b) The Act of 6 June 1942 is hereby amended * * * Provided, That the provisions of this Act shall not apply * * *."

I think the 81st Congress is entitled to credit for their action in 1949; and anyone who desires to look up the citation given should be able to find it.

Who Used This Insignia?

■ The American Society of Military Insignia Collectors has tried for several years without success to obtain identification of the distinctive unit insignia appearing below. We would appreciate your assistance in this endeavor by publishing this letter together with the attached sketch on a space available basis.

What unit is it?

"On a yellow shield; in dexter and sinister chief, red brackets or corbels (similar to those found in Spanish style architecture); in base, a red arrow head, point down."

If any of your readers can be of assistance, a post card to the writer would be appreciated.

SPACE RANKS

New assignments to the Air Force of space projects by the Advanced Research Projects Agency (THE JOURNAL 26 September) prompted one Air Force enthusiast at the Pentagon to draw up a tentative rank structure for a "U. S. Space Force."

It was suggested that the Space Force salute "will begin with the open palm, faced outward at waist level and brought forward with increasing acceleration, snapping crisply and smartly to apogee."

The suggested rank structure:

Galacteer—Four Star
Liftenant Galacteer—Three Star
Majoris Galacteer—Two Star
Solardeen—One Star
Planeteer—Colonel
Liftenant Planeteer—Lieutenant Colonel
Orbiteer—Major
Ranger—Captain
First Liftenant—First Lieutenant
Second Liftenant—Second Lieutenant
Stageman—CWO
Jr. Stageman—WO
Senior Blasteer—CMS
Jr. Blasteer—SMS
Blasteer—M/Sgt.
Chief Nozzleman—T/Sgt.

Padman 1/e—A/1c
Padman 2/e—A/2c

Basic Padman—Airman

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—In a last minute burst of speed, the Senate on 26 September approved the Services' Career Compensation Act, and the House, at the opening of its session the next day, accepted the Senate amendments.

50 Years Ago—Officers of the Army who served during the Spanish war in commands with a rank higher than that they held in the Regular Army are receiving letters from the Auditor of the War Department telling them that they are indebted to the United States Government, owing to a mistake made in computing their rate of pay during the war. The sums vary from $200 to $400. The officers were given from 30 to 60 days in which to pay back the money.

95 Years Ago—Some of the gallant officers in the field will pardon us for suggesting that it will be well to brush up their tactics a little, which, after the fatigues incident to a long campaign, seem to have been somewhat neglected.

APX Shows "Progress," Says Adm. Wright

The NATO-wide command post exercise Side Step demonstrated that "considerable progress has been made toward attaining the best possible setup for ensuring that the Alliance's great mercenary fleets would get maximum protection during war," Admiral Jerauld Wright, USN, Supreme Allied Commanding Atlantic, reported this week.

Thirteen NATO nations worked with NATO commanders of the Atlantic, European, and Channel Commands in Exercise Side Step which was conducted 17-25 September. The national ministries of defense and shipping control groups participated fully as did the various NATO headquarters.

Admiral Sir Manley Powers, RN, Allied Commander-in-Chief Channel, stated that Side Step was "extremely valuable" in testing and training headquarters personnel of all Channel Command nationalities.

WHAT'S IN A NAME? On 10 December 1957, Lt. Gen. Donald L. Putt, USAF (now retired), then Deputy CofS, Development, directed the establishment of a Directorate of Astronautics at USAF Headquarters, under Brig. Gen. Homer A. Boushay, USAF. The Secretary of the Air Force, under pressure from the Department of Defense which didn't like the use of the word "Astronautics," cancelled the directive three days later. On 29 July 1958, General Boushay was named Air Force Director of Advanced Technology.

ALTHOUGH SHOT DOWN for Air Force employment, "Astronautics," is perfectly acceptable for use by the Navy. In the Office of the Assistant Chief of Naval Operations (Air), there is an "Astronautics Division Director." He is Capt. G. S. Bogart, USN.

THE ANNOUNCED OBJECTIVE of the Air Force's Second Annual Reserve Forces Seminar isn't likely to be achieved. In the official Seminar program, CofS General White says: "The information which you receive will enable you, as members of the Air Force team, to speak with increased authority on behalf of the Air Force when you return to your local communities. I trust you will do just that."

THE CAREFULLY SELECTED PARTICIPANTS were expected to return home with the view of "selling" the Reserve Forces program throughout the Nation. After hearing conflicting comments, ranging from Secretary Douglas' statement that the ARF is "a very valuable asset," to General LeMay's observation that the Reserves and the Air Guard "probably can not make a contribution in the direct combat field," the top-level civilian leaders are confused. They will find it difficult to put across to the public the philosophy behind the ARF programs.

WATCH FOR TOP ARMY SPEAKERS to extol the increasingly close relationship with the National Guard at next week's meeting of the National Guard Association in San Antonio. There will be high praise for the achievements of the Air National Guard, as well as the Army National Guard. Army leaders, such as General Bruce Clarke of the Continental Army Command, have been impressed with the participation of ANG units in joint Army-Air Force exercises.

STRONG SERVICE INTEREST WILL BE FOCUSED on the coming session of the U. S. Supreme Court. The Court must decide whether military tribunals overseas may try civilian members of Service families for non-capital crimes. The Court has already decided that military courts have no jurisdiction over capital offenses committed by members of Service families overseas. Service lawyers fear that the Supreme Court also will take away the right of courts-martial to try Service family members for lesser crimes.

TOP SERVICE LAWYERS AND JUDGES of the Court of Military Appeals have taken their stand on the matter. They say that depriving military courts of jurisdiction over family members would be a great blow to Service morale and rights. The result would be that civilian members of military families would become subject to foreign and unfamiliar laws and legal procedures for even the most minor offenses.

ARMY AVIATORS are casting a wistful eye toward the Cessna 407 twin-jet utility aircraft now being shown to the military services (see Page 22). The four-place pressurized cabin and 455 mph cruise speed would give fast wings to Army liaison and target acquisition. Its 4,657 lb. empty weight is well within the 5,000 lb. limitation placed upon Army fixed wing aircraft by the DoD Directive of 18 March 1957.

ONE ARMY AIRCRAFT which is nearly three times the authorized maximum weight is its new de Havilland Caribou (14,500 lbs. empty). Special permission for the Army to buy five of these big planes for evaluation was given by former SecDef Wilson in 1956. Delivery of the first Caribou will be made in a ceremony 7 October at the deHavilland plant in Toronto, Canada.

DoD's COMPLETE RESPONSIBILITY for the official announcement of the North American F-108 cancellation is pin-pointed in one small letter in the Pentagon release—"S." Air Force official style, rigidly adhered to, is that the singular is "weapon system" and the plural "weapon systems." Never is the word "weapon" given a plural in this context, according to USAF credo. Yet, the text of the announcement of the F-108 termination, although only four short paragraphs long, used "weapons systems" four times.

AIR FORCE BRIEFERS at last week's Reserve Forces Seminar, which came on the heels of the F-108 cancellation, gave participants no advice whatsoever that the Soviet bomber threat had diminished, and therefore the new fighter would be less vital to air defense. On the contrary, the briefers emphasized the continuing potential of Soviet bombers to strike against the North American continent.

THE SERVICES WILL BE ANXIOUS to learn the reactions of outspoken Representative Kowalski (D-Conn.), a retired Army colonel and member of the House Armed Services Committee, to his current inspection trip in Europe. He has been blasting the Services for alleged waste of manpower. On his MATS flight to Europe, Representative Kowalski was accompanied by his wife.

HIGH-LEVEL FRICTION is reported at the Pentagon between the offices of the Director of Research and Engineering (Dr. Herbert F. York) and ARPA (Roy Johnson) as the aftermath of the announcement last week of the space project shifts. The ARPA people feel that Dr. York went too far at a news conference in outlining ARPA plans. There were rumors this week that Mr. Johnson had protested the manner of the announcement to Deputy Defense Secretary Gates.

THE ARMY'S RESEARCH CHIEF, Lt. Gen. Arthur G. Trudeau, made only brief mention as to the future of the Army's Ballistic Missile Agency at Huntsville, Ala., in a prepared address delivered before the Alabama Tuberculosis Association 29 September at Birmingham. "The great capabilities existing here in Alabama must be retained as a national asset, whatever the turn in space responsibilities," General Trudeau declared. The "turn" refers, of course, to the Pentagon decision (The Journal 26 September) to assign space projects from the Advanced Research Projects Agency to the Services. The Army was greatly disappointed at the initial allocation of projects, notably the decision to give the Air Force responsibility for space boosters.

SOME MEMBERS OF CONGRESS, particularly in Alabama and Michigan, have questioned the Defense Department on the new blows at Army space projects. There is no doubt the Pentagon action will be the subject of comprehensive interrogation on Capitol Hill early in the next session.

LT. GEN. TRUMAN H. LANDON'S forthright presentation on Air Force personnel policies to the annual Reserve Forces Seminar (see Pages 1, 8) won acclaim from participants in the two-day Pentagon session. It is certain to be studied carefully throughout the Air Force and on Capitol Hill. General Landon makes a telling point in relating how the present Air Force officer structure is more liberal in some respects for an authorized strength of 69,000 Regulars than it is for the actual strength of 126,000. Air Force families will be pleased to learn of new efforts that will be made to obtain more housing, improved quarters allowances, and remote and isolated duty pay.

THE AF PERSONNEL CHIEF and other Air Force leaders are going to have a rough fight on their hands to win approval for the career incentive items proposed by the Cordiner Committee but not yet been implemented. The budget pinch hurts chances of Administration support for fiscal '61, but there is one offsetting factor. The new budget will call for more manpower cuts, the impact of which can be minimized only if "selective retention" rates rise. This will require approval of at least some of the Cordiner-recommended actions.

A NEW ARMY INSTRUCTION ON SATELLITES has been published. Circular 420-16 is aimed, however, at a low-level problem. Its subject: "Pest Control At Satellite Facilities." There is one high-altitude angle; instances of non-compliance with pest control operations are reported at Nike missile facilities, which are satellites of larger commands.

A NEW MISSILE UNIT has been activated by the Air Force. It is the 1381st Geodetic Survey Squadron (Missile) at Orlando AFB, Fla., under Lt. Col. Harry G. Peterson. Its mission: accurately locating missile launch sites and check points for electronic aerial mapping. The squadron also will plot variations in gravitational attraction on the earth's surface. Colonel Peterson had been Deputy Chief of the Air Section MAAAG Vietnam.

SOME MEMBERS OF THE AIR RESERVE FORCES—the collective name for the Air National Guard and the Air Force Reserves—have expressed a half-hearted plea for a new group name. Lt. Gen. William E. Hall, head of the Continental Air Command, comments that ARF sounds too much like the bark of Sandy, the pet of Little Orphan Annie.

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER NAMED two of the most senior major generals in the Marine Corps for three-star rank to fill vacancies created by the bloc retirements of the Corps' entire slate of lieutenant generals (see Page 1). All Marine three-star officers submitted retirement requests following the nomination 12 August of the fifth-ranking two-star officer, Maj. Gen. David M. Shoup for the Corps top post. There was speculation that if the President moved far down the lineal list of major generals to name successors for the retiring three-star officers, there would be additional retirement requests from two-star officers. The two remaining senior major generals have a good chance of making their third star. There are still two three-star slots to be filled and a third billet for lieutenant general will open up 1 January when CMC-designee Shoup vacates his temporary post as Chief of Staff.

IF A STRICT SENIORITY PATTERN is followed, Maj. Gen. Samuel S. Jack, CG Air, Fleet Marine Forces, Pacific, will be tapped for a third star. He is the senior Naval Aviator on the two-star list. In recent years, it has been Marine Corps policy to have a Naval Aviator assigned to at least one of the three-star billets.

Army Extends To 1 January The Date For Top NCO Upgrading Program

The Army has ordered a one month extension to 1 January 1960 of the effective date for the E-8/E-9 Upgrading Program.

The purpose of an effective date for implementation of the program, the Army said, is to establish a uniform date for all units of the Army on which personnel reports which will reflect new MOS classifications resulting from the program. Other programs, such as changes to manning tables, allocation of quotas for promotion, promotion of individuals, and proficiency pay will not be affected.

The effective date for the change in personnel reporting was extended to insure that commanders in the field would have sufficient time to do a careful and accurate job on the reclassification actions required by Circular 611-41.

Since the E-8/E-9 Upgrading Program introduced some changes in the concept of classification of personnel, custodians of personnel records are being required to verify the primary MOS of all non-commissioned officers in pay grades E-4 through E-9 and all specialists in pay grades E-4 through E-7. When an individual is found not qualified in his current primary MOS, he will be reclassified to another, preferably one in which the Army is short of its requirements, consistent with the man's current skills, abilities, and qualifications. This review of enlisted classifications will also assist the continued implementation of the proficiency pay program by insuring proper classification by MOS, skill level, and grade.

An Army announcement said:

"The administrative workload involved will be considerable, but it is anticipated that the results in terms of proper classification will more than justify the effort involved. In undertaking this task, the Army is placing primary emphasis on accuracy. It is this consideration which led to an extension for one month of the effective date. Commanders and others involved can do a better job when not under the pressure of a crash action."

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED:

Million Dollar Drive For Foundation

The season's first meeting of the Army Wives Council at Patton Hall, Ft. Myer, Va., on 30 September was opened by Mrs. T. J. Conway, President, who introduced Mrs. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, wife of the Army Chief of Staff, and later, General John E. Dahlquist, USA-Ret., Director of the Board of the Army Distaff Foundation.

Mrs. Lemnitzer welcomed the members of the Council and explained that three representatives from each of the 45 Army women's organizations in the Washington area compose the Council, with one from each allowed a vote.

In introducing General Dahlquist, Mrs. Conway pointed out that the AWC had been the "mother" of the Distaff Foundation, but that the "baby" is now completely independent and on its own.

General Dahlquist, summarizing the work that has been done and the projects now under way in the Foundation's establishment of "a home for mothers, wives, and daughters of career Army officers, who had never had a chance to establish themselves in civilian communities," said from the start, they had made it clear they "were not building a poor house," that they wanted, and finally found a place in a good neighborhood, after looking at some thirty-five sites.

Such considerations as proximity to the Walter Reed Army Hospital, the matter of transportation, and acreage enough to allow for gardens and park after building the estimated number of units, were answered by the purchase of a beautiful home and 15 acres at 6200 Nebraska Ave., N.W.

Some obstacles, such as zoning opposition, have been gradually overcome and the Foundation this week will move its offices into the house on the property.

The employment of a New York firm last summer to survey the property from every angle cleared up a number of problems, and now, with a charter and by-laws, a "Plan," two lawyers and an architect, General Dahlquist said the Foundation has employed a fund-raising firm in New York, whose representative, Mr. John Parker, is here and ready to go to work.

For this, the Foundation is pleading for volunteer help. The drive will kick off about 1 November, with the goal of raising one million dollars within a year—an undertaking that will need the talents of all—typists, file clerks, etc., addressing and stuffing envelopes for bulk mailing.

The office will be open from 10 a.m. to Grumman Aircraft Engineering Corporation of Bethpage, N. Y., has awarded a subcontract totaling more than $8 million to the Aerojet General Corporation for development of a high performance propulsion unit which will be installed in the Navy's air-to-air guided missile, the Eagle.

The announcement follows an eight-company design competition, conducted by Grumman, which began in February. The Bendix Aviation Corporation, in association with Grumman, was the winner of the 16-company Eagle design competition last year. Bendix Systems Division, Ann Arbor, Mich., is the prime contractor.

Bendix is responsible for the development of the Eagle's flight control, electronic guidance, and support equipment. As the major subcontractor, Grumman is responsible for the development of the airframe, the propulsion unit, and the ground handling equipment.

pletely out of the question without a drastic reorientation of the Nation's attitude toward taxation."

General Friedman pointed out, however, that authoritative studies, such as the Rockefeller Report, have recommended that the Services need as much as an additional $3 billion per year.

"I do not make a bid for a specific amount," he said, "but recognizing price increases and the increased cost of modern technology, I think it is inescapable that defense costs are going up."

General Friedman said that "while I hold no particular brief for relating defense costs to the gross national product this does give us a useful measure. The Defense Budget," he explained, "is now running around 9% of the Gross National Product."

"If we can agree that a defense effort of this level is not damaging to the economy today—and that if this ratio is maintained it would not damage the economy in the future—we then might reasonably expect dollar increases in the Defense Budget proportionate to the gain in the Gross National Product."

The AF Budget Chief said this would mean an increase of about $1.5 billion each year, "as opposed to the $3 billion increase previously advocated, but, I might add, not realized."

General Palmer Succeeds General Palmer As Deputy CinC Of European Command

In a brief ceremony at Camp Des Loges, 10 miles west of Paris, General Charles D. Palmer, USA, succeeded his brother, General Williston B. Palmer, USA, as Deputy Commander-in-Chief, U. S. European Command, on 30 September—the first time in American history that two brothers have both attained four-star rank in the Military Forces.

The U. S. European Command is the American Unified Command under which come U. S. Army, Air Force and Naval Forces in the European region.

General W. B. Palmer was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal by General Lauris Norstad, USAF, U. S. Commander-in-Chief, Europe. This was the third time that General Palmer has received the DSM during his long career.

The Palmer brothers were born in the Army, sons of a West Point graduate who served in the Philippine insurrection and in WWI. They marched side by side in a prize-winning company of the Washington High School cadets.

As General Williston B. Palmer puts it: "I have been running scared for years, trying to keep ahead of my younger brother. I have kept ahead of him to the end of my own Army career, but he still has several years left in which to run up the higher score."

General Williston B. Palmer, who will return to the U. S., was born in Chicago 11 November 1899. He was graduated from the U. S. Military Academy in 1919, the Command and General Staff School in 1937 and the Army War College in 1939. During WWII he was CG of the VII Corps Artillery in the Normandy invasion, the capture of Cherbourg, the St. Lo. breakthrough, and the battles at Mortain, Mons, Liege, Aachen and Cologne; also in the Battle of the Bulge, the encirclement of the Ruhr and the drive across Germany to the Elbe River.

He was Director of Logistics for the European Command in 1948 and Vice CofS for the European Command in 1949. In November 1949 he took command of the 82d Airborne Division at Ft. Bragg, N. C., and in November 1950 switched to command of the 2d Armored Division to Germany in July 1951, then was transferred to Korea in December 1951 as CG, X Corps. In December 1952 he became the Assistant CofS, G-4, for the Army. On 13 September 1954 he became the first Deputy CofS for Logistics.

On 1 May 1955 General W. B. Palmer was appointed Vice CofS of the Army, and on 1 June 1957 he became Deputy U. S. Commander in Chief, Europe.

General Charles D. Palmer was born in Chicago 20 February 1902. He was graduated from the U. S. Military Academy in 1924 and from the Command and General Staff School in 1938.

During WWII he served in the European Theater as CofS of the Second Armored Division and the Sixth Corps. During the Korean conflict he served as Artillery Commander of the First Cavalry Division and assumed command of that division in February 1951.

He was CofS of the U. S. European Command in 1954 and 1955. He has commanded the Sixth Army since March 1958.

He has been awarded the Distinguished Service Medal (twice), the Silver Star (twice), the Legion of Merit (twice), the Distinguished Flying Cross (twice), the Bronze Star Medal, and the Air Medal with 12 clusters.

Ft. Campbell Families Use Less Utilities To Help 101st Abn. Div. Meet Budget Crisis

Ft. CAMPBELL, Ky.

STRAC's famed 101st Airborne Division must soon ask the wives and families of its soldiers to help it save money and live within a reduced budget.

Commanded by Maj. Gen. W. C. Westmoreland, this division of the Strategic Army Corps has an operating budget of approximately $15.5 million. Last year, in Fiscal '59, the budget was $16.6 million. Further reductions are expected in the fiscal year 1961 budget.

A JOURNAL

STAFF REPORT

One manifestation of the tight money situation here was pointed out by General Westmoreland this week prior to a special alert demonstration.

The "Screaming Eagles" Commander told newsmen: "As you notice, paint is chipping off the temporary buildings. This is a reflection of the lack of funds in the Army Budget."

"We are able to keep the temporary buildings waterproof, and just barely waterproof," he said.

General Westmoreland characterized the 101st's money situation as "very austere."

To help make ends meet, the Division has embarked on two economy programs among its civilian employees, designed to cut down waste and increase production.

So far, officials say, these two programs have achieved their purpose and have enabled the Division to live within its tight pocketbook.

THE JOURNAL learned that further economies must be effected if the 101st is to keep in top combat shape during FY '61. As one of these economy measures, 101st Division families will be urged to use local utilities—light, water and heat—sparingly. They will also be asked to find other everyday ways to save "operating funds."

Savings from the new program are expected to total up to $100,000 yearly.

Up to the present time, cuts in the division budget have been taken mostly in plant rundown and maintenance, one official told THE JOURNAL. There have also been reductions in the number of civilian personnel. There has been no reduction in training or combat readiness.

The division's maintenance problems have been complicated by the fact that Campbell recently took over 12,000 units of Wherry Housing. Already shorthanded in the maintenance field as a result of budget cuts, the division has been forced to adopt a self-help maintenance plan by which members of each unit on the post are given special training to help out with the Post's family housing chores.

because of adverse weather conditions created by Hurricane Gracie.

Lt. Col. David L. Gundling commands the airborne engineers of Maj. Gen. W. C. Westmoreland's 101st Airborne Division at nearby Ft. Campbell, Ky.

The airdrop saw 333 soldiers, led by General Westmoreland and Colonel Gundling, parachute into action followed by 41 plane loads of equipment aboard Lockheed C-130 Hercules transports.

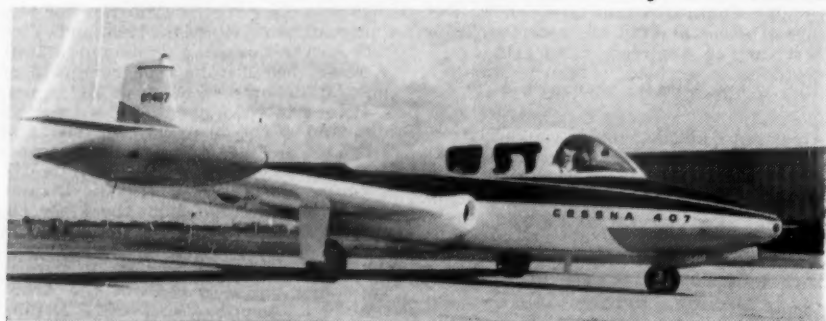

There were only three minor injuries among the paratroopers. The jump was made in winds which reached a peak of eight knots.

In addition to the D6S tractors, the airdrop included 3 Caterpillar road graders, which weigh 20,232 pounds each when rigged, and eight Reo 2½-ton dump trucks, as well as jeeps and other equipment organic to an airborne engineer battalion.

Among those observing the demonstration was Lt. Gen. Emerson C. Itschner, Army Chief of Engineers.

Cessna Designs New 4-Place Twin Jet To Meet Needs Of All Military Services

CESNA'S new Model 407 four-place twin jet aircraft, designed to meet the needs of all the Services for a utility aircraft, was unveiled at a closed showing to officials of the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps this week.

Dwane L. Wallace, Cessna President, told military representatives that the low-wing, pressurized 407 was designed "to fulfill military needs for a multi-mission, low-cost jet. We are aware of the pressing military need for a low-cost jet replacement for the training and utility aircraft now being phased out of service. To achieve minimum cost and maximum utility we drew upon the experience of T-37 trainer development, and 200,000 hours of T-37 service utilization as a basis for 407 design."

Robert L. Lair, Vice President and General Manager of Cessna's Military Aircraft Division, said that work on the 407 has been underway since 1956 and that Cessna has spent about $500,000 on it so far.

The 407, he said, was designed to meet four criteria: 1) speed, range, and performance in accordance with today's standards; 2) a comfortable aircraft to fly in; 3) simple to maintain and operate, and 4) low initial cost and low operating costs.

The 407 has a gross weight of 9,300 pounds, a mission range up to 1,380 nautical miles, and cruising speeds up to 404 knots (465 mph). The cabin area is large for a four-place jet. Removable rear seats afford versatility for high priority cargo transportation, or installation of specialized mission equipment. The cabin is pressurized at a 7.5 psi differential, or about 8,000 cabin altitude at a normal cruising altitude of 46,400 feet. Single engine ceiling is in excess of 25,000 feet. It can operate from any 4,000 foot strip.

Mr. Lair said that the development of the new Continental 356-9 jet engine made it possible for the 407 to meet its criteria. The 356-9, is a derated version of the engine which powers the highly successful Ryan Firebee Q2C drone.

Arthur W. Wild, Vice President and General Manager of the Continental Aviation and Engineering Corporation, said that the 356-9 engine is the newest of the J69 series of turbojets. The engine which powers the Ryan Firebee successfully qualified at 1,700 pounds thrust. By derating this engine to 1,400 pounds thrust with a reduction of turbine inlet temperature in excess of 100° F., the long-life characteristic for man-carrying aircraft was attained. The engine is 44.8 inches in length and 22.3 in diameter.

Derby Frye, Director of Military Relations for Cessna, said that the 407 could be in production 16 months from the date of contract. The price, he estimated, would be about $202,500 each, based on an order of 300 aircraft.

Mr. Frye pointed out that the 407 was suitable for a large number of military missions including combat readiness training, utility, liaison, rapid transportation of highly specialized personnel or "black boxes," and in new areas connected with weapon systems support.

The 407 was shown to Service representatives from 29 September to 2 October on the terrace at Arlington Towers, near the Pentagon.

North American Aviation Completes Astrodyne Buy

North American Aviation, Inc., has announced completion of the purchase of the full interest in Astrodyne, Inc., and its merger into North America.

Plans were first announced in July for North American to acquire the Phillips Petroleum Company interest in Astrodyne, previously owned jointly by the two companies.

The solid propulsion operations being performed at McGregor, Tex., will be continued there as part of North American's Rocketdyne Division. Rocketdyne has specialized in the development of high thrust liquid propellant rocket engines and has furnished rocket engines providing thrust for the Atlas, Thor, Jupiter and other missiles for the Air Force and Army. Rocketdyne's headquarters are in Canoga Park, Calif., with a manufacturing plant and test facility at Neosho, Mo.

Fruehauf Names Military Chief

Appointment of Jack Keir as Director of Military Engineering is announced by Mr. Edward R. Neumann, Director of Military Equipment Division, Fruehauf Trailer Company, Detroit.

Mr. Keir, a 23 year veteran of Fruehauf Engineering Department, was formerly Chief Sales Engineer.

He will be in charge of all engineering research and development on Fruehauf's military projects for the Government, including missile handling equipment.

Chance Vought Gets $9.5 Million Contract For Modernization Of 164 Crusaders

The Navy has awarded a $9.5 million contract to Chance Vought Aircraft Inc. of Dallas for modernizing 147 early model F8U-1 Crusader fighters and 17 FH8-1P photo planes.

A Pentagon announcement said the program, to be conducted at a rate of 11 planes per month, will give the aircraft "a considerably longer service life at a minimum of expense and also provide the pilot with a Crusader equipped with the new features," which are standard in new Crusader aircraft.

Included in the program will be incorporation of advances made in the aircraft's liquid oxygen, electrical, fuel transfer, hydraulic, escape, and control systems. The aircraft also will be processed to provide for increased protection against corrosion during long periods of exposure to salt spray aboard carriers at sea.

The Crusader made its first flight in March 1955 and was the Navy's first truly supersonic fighter. It has been serving with Fleet operational squadrons since March 1957 and saw duty during both the Lebanon and Formosan crises in 1958.

In 1956 it set the first Thompson Trophy national speed record in excess of 1,000 miles an hour and in 1957 became the first aircraft to span the continent faster than the speed of sound.

Fleet deliveries of the newer and faster F8U-2 Crusader are now in progress. Still another aircraft in the Crusader series—the F8U-2N all-weather version with an increased capability for detecting and destroying enemy targets in darkness and inclement weather—is scheduled to join the Fleet late in 1960.

The contract announced today is the second of its type awarded for Crusader modernization. An earlier program, involving 103 aircraft, began in January 1958 and will continue into next year.

Two AF Officers Report To Aerojet

Two Air Force officers have reported to Aerojet-General Corporation, Azusa, Calif., as part of the Air Force's Training-With-Industry program in the field of astronautics and space vehicle project management.

They are Lt. Col. Robert K. Le Beck and Maj. Harold M. Powell, Jr. They have bachelors degrees in engineering from the University of Washington and Alabama Polytechnic Institute, respectively. Colonel Le Beck also holds the degree of M.B.A. (R&D Management) from the University of Chicago and Major Powell has an M.S. degree (Engineering Administration) from the Air Force Institute of Technology.

HAWK PROGRESS

New contracts totalling $30.1 million for the Army Hawk missile program has been awarded Raytheon Company, Waltham, Mass., by the Boston Ordnance District.

Raytheon developed the ground-to-air Hawk and is prime contractor for the super-sonic missile. Effective even at tree top levels, Hawk is soon to become operational with field forces.

Work to be performed under the funding will be carried on at the firm's Missile Systems Division plant at Andover, Mass.

The two officers will devote a 40-week period to observing the operations of Aerojet-General at Azusa, at the company's Solid and Liquid Rocket Plants at Sacramento and at Aerojet's nucleonics subsidiary at San Ramon.

Ryan Wins Contract For Polaris Project

Ryan Aeronautical Company of San Diego has been awarded a contract to fabricate full-size chambers for the solid rocket propellant of the Navy's submarine-launched Lockheed Polaris missile.

T. Claude Ryan, President, said the order from the Navy Bureau of Ordnance disclosed that Ryan has been developing a unique welded "strip-winding" technique while performing research on an earlier phase of this project, in which a large number of sub-scale model chambers were built in recent months.

Paper-thin steel alloys of great strength were utilized, and tests simulated the enormous internal pressures encountered in the Polaris rocket motor. The cylinders showed capability of withstanding stress to 305,000 pounds per square inch static tension ultimate stress—far beyond that ordinarily achieved in industrial use of solid wall cylinders.

AMF Gets $42.6 Million Titan Contract

The Air Force has awarded a $42.6 million contract to the American Machine & Foundry Company of New York City, it is announced jointly by Maj. Gen. Ben I. Funk, Commander of Air Materiel Command's Ballistic Missiles Center, and Mr. Morehead Patterson, AMF board chairman. The contract, which becomes effective this month, was let to build, install, and test the first 18 operational underground launching systems for the Martin Titan ICBM at Lowry AFB near Denver, Colo.

The new contract raises the total AMF business for Titan launching systems within the past year to over $103 million in prime and subcontracts.

Big Atlas Order To Bosch Arma

Contracts totalling $53.3 million to provide all-inertial guidance systems for the Convair Atlas ICBM have been awarded American Bosch Arma Corporation, General Funk and Charles W. Perelle, President, American Bosch Arma Corporation, said the contracts called for additional inertial guidance systems and associated ground support equipment.

The Atlas guidance system now in production at the Garden City, N. Y. plant of Arma Division of American Bosch Arma was scheduled originally by the Air Force for the Titan. In mid 1958, Air Force planners noted its rapid progress from research and development stages to production readiness and programmed the system as standard guidance for later operational Atlas ICBMs.

Six Firms Work On Minuteman Project

Boeing Airplane Company has awarded contracts to six firms for communications techniques for the Minuteman ICBM.

So called "hybrid" techniques, involving a combination of communications methods will be studied by Raytheon Company, Hughes Aircraft Company, Hermetic Electronics, General Electric Company, Westinghouse Electric Company, and Philco Corporation.

Talon T-38 Scores Century Flight

An Air Force Northrop T-38 Talon supersonic trainer flashed through the 100th Talon test flight 28 September at Edwards AFB, Calif., less than six months after the test program began.

The 100 flights amount to nearly half of the prototype flight test schedule and approximately one-third of the combined prototype and T-38A test program.

Two Talons share the 100-flight total. The first of the twin-jet space age trainers made its maiden flight 10 April, and has been aloft 64 times. The second T-38 entered flight testing 12 June, and has been flown 36 times.

Milton Kuska, Director of Flight Test Engineering for Northrop's Norair Division, which produces the T-38 at Hawthorne, Calif., said the test program is "right on schedule."

The T-38 has encountered none of the major problems usually experienced in flight testing supersonic aircraft, and not a single aerodynamic change has been indicated in the test results, Mr. Kuska said.

The 100th Talon flight was made by Capt. Swart Nelson, USAF T-38 project test pilot.

Space Signal From Satellite Dedicates New Lear Facility

A signal from outer space highlighted dedication ceremonies for the new space-age facility of Lear, Incorporated, at Grand Rapids, Mich., 25 September.

The new plant, which will house the corporation's Instrument Division, was specifically designed for the delicate manufacturing and assembly operations required in the production of precision components and systems for aircraft and missiles.

A crowd of more than 4,000 saw Deputy Defense Secretary Thomas S. Gates press a button that called in a signal from an orbiting U.S. satellite which was picked up by the Army's Astro-Observation Station at Ft. Monmouth, N. J.

The magnified signal, translated electronically so that it was both audible and visible to the thousands attending the ceremony, was used to drop the curtain on a plaque which read:

"This plant is dedicated to progress in air and space science, in technology and human security."

The audience heard the beeps from the signal, picked up an estimated 23,000 miles from the earth, broadcast over a public address system. They also watched the same signal actuate the switch controls for a dramatic array of lights surrounding the dedicatory plaque.

As the beeps reached their highest volume and the lighting display its greatest intensity, the signal dropped the plaque draperies.

The Astro-Observation Station which intercepted and transmitted the signal to Grand Rapids is a division of the Army and Signal Research Laboratory. Directing the operations from Monmouth was Lloyd H. Manamon, engineer in charge of the observation station.

Prior to the dramatic outer space dedication, described as the first such use of a satellite signal in connection with U.S.

industry, a formal program included talks on the future of space exploration by Roy W. Johnson, Director of the Advanced Projects Research Agency of the Defense Department, and William P. Lear, Sr., Chairman of the board of Lear.

The new 172,800 square foot facility doubles the capacity of Lear, Incorporated's Instrument Division. The plant is located on a 48-acre site and employs some 2,200 workers, most of whom are skilled technicians.

Col. Herberth Heads 6th Army Transport

Col. Frank W. Herberth, jr., has been named Sixth Army Transportation Officer, succeeding Col. Louis Greenfield who left the Presidio of San Francisco for Seattle to command the Army Transportation Terminal Agency there.

Colonel Herberth has been well known in San Francisco Bay Area transportation circles since 1933 when he was employed by the American Hawaiian Steamship Company as district freight agent. Before entering the Army, Colonel Herberth was also active in the San Francisco Civic Traffic Association and the Junior Chamber of Commerce. He received his degree in Engineering from the University of California in 1931.

Colonel Herberth came to his present post following three years in France, first a six month's tour in Paris while attending the NATO Defense College, and the remainder with the Transportation Division of SHAPE. Mrs. Herberth, the former Martha Carlson, accompanied the colonel on his last two overseas tours.

The Herberths reside at 3242 Clay Street, San Francisco.

Col. Muth Leads Chemical Command

Col. Roy W. Muth, Commanding Officer of the Chemical Corps Engineering Command has been named to succeed Brig. Gen. Harold Walmsley, USA-Ret., as Commander of Army Chemical Center and Chemical Corps Materiel Command, Edgewood, Md.

The Materiel Command supplies chemical warfare equipment to the Armed Forces all over the world. Under an integrated command set-up, Colonel Muth, USMA '30, will also serve as Army Chemical Center's Post Commander.

The new commander holds a masters degree in business administration from Harvard.

Colonel Muth is married to a WAC major, the former Mary B. Warner of Philadelphia. He has three children by a former marriage, Roy, an Infantry first lieutenant at Ft. Bragg, N. C.; Mrs. Jane Arnau of Greenville, S. C., and Gretchen, 16, a senior at Edgewood High School.

Signal Corps Veteran Joins TelePrompTer Corp.

George A. Weiss has been named West Coast Manager of the Group Communications Division of TelePrompTer Corporation after many years of service with the U. S. Armed Forces in military and civilian capacities.

Mr. Weiss was formerly attached to the Army Electronic Proving Ground at Ft. Huachuca, Ariz., serving as Civilian Assistant to the Chief Scientist and Special Assistant to the Commanding General. From 1952 until 1957, he served as an Executive Officer of the 505th Signal Group at that base.

Navy Orders T.V.-Torpedo Device

Award of a $140,000 contract to Vitro Laboratories, Silver Spring, Md., for design and development of a combination mobile deepwater television system and a retrieving device for spent torpedoes is announced by the Navy.

The new device will be designed for use by the Naval Torpedo Station, Keyport, Wash., at the Torpedo Test Range in Dabob Bay, an arm of Puget Sound. It will be a self-propelled unit making use of closed circuit television, with deepwater lights to illuminate the camera's field of view.

An operator in a surface vessel guides the unit and views the underwater area over a television screen. When a torpedo is sighted, the operator guides the unit to it and a pair of claws clamp the torpedo and bring it to the surface.

The retrieving device is capable of a radius of 1,000 feet in shallow water and has a radius of 650 feet at its maximum depth. Two cables which connect the unit to the surface vehicle carry the television signals to the operator.

Missile Lab Chief Ends Army Service

Col. Thomas E. Wood, Director of the Ordnance Missile Laboratories Division, Army Rocket and Guided Missile Agency, Huntsville, Ala., has retired, after 29 years service.

Colonel Wood, USMA '34, came to Redstone in February 1958 from Brazil, where he had served for three years with the Joint Brazil-U. S. Military Commission.

Pentagon Under New Capitol Budget Pressure

From first page—
potential and cost of elements from all Services.

With the departure 1 November of Assistant Secretary of Defense W. J. McNeil (Comptroller) from the Pentagon and the prospective resignation of Secretary McElroy, it is questionable whether a "functional budget" will be possible by the end of this year.

But there seems little question that this is in the offing, and that it is going to have a major impact on deliberations of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Under the present system, Chairman Mahon has complained, the JCS "do not really slug it out with bare knuckles in calculating what the requirements are."

Addressing General Thomas D. White, Air Force Chief of Staff, Mr. Mahon said: "Often you do not even discuss how many wings we need to provide for in a given year, I am told. You do not even take the time to discuss whether or not you would include a nuclear carrier or conventional type carrier."

"You do not go into any budget for a given year, and you do not go into detail as to whether or not you ought to have 14 or 15 divisions in the Army or perhaps 25 divisions in the Army."

"I am rather of the opinion that the Joint Chiefs are not the advisory group that the Nation expects," Mr. Mahon said.

Now, the Appropriations Subcommittee Chairman has made it known to Secretary McElroy that he was not talking merely for the record. Representative Mahon wants action, and his desires are not treated lightly at the Pentagon.

RUNNING INTERFERENCE FOR SAC

Now SAC's B-52G has a pair of hard-running teammates... the GAM-77 Hound Dog air-to-surface missiles. They can lunge into action at supersonic speeds to clear a path for the bomber by knocking out ground-defense centers hundreds of miles away. A pair of Hound Dogs carried under the wings of the Boeing B-52 increases the bomber's striking power... gives it a triple-punch capability. Successful test launches of the jet-powered missiles are being made on schedule over the Atlantic missile range. The system will be deployed by 1960 under the present accelerated development program.

The Missile Division of North American Aviation is weapon system contractor for the GAM-77.
